

I am disturbed that Sinclair, a media company that reaches one quarter of the US, is pushing a highly partisan TV ad shortly before the presidential election.

This is not a democratic process when the access granted through the public resource is used by a few companies like Sinclair to control what we see, rather than reflecting community values and points of view.

We need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. License renewal through the FCC must be a meaningful review of how media contribute to our communities, not a blank check to profit from the commons.

Thank you.
